October is Breast Cancer Awareness Month

There are many organizations that raise money to help breast cancer victims and for research. Pro-lifers were disappointed to learn of the Susan G. Komen for the Cure research fund giving a large sum of money to Planned Parenthood (see August 2008 Life News, page 2). For those seeking to donate to good breast cancer research, listed below are three recommended in the Right to Life of Greater Cincinnati, Inc., Newsletter, October 2007.

♥ Breast Cancer Prevention Institute, 9 Vassar St., Poughkeepsie, NY 12601; 1-86-NO CANCER; www.bcpinstitute.org. Founded by Joel Brind, Ph.D. and Angela Lanfranchi, M.D., BCP is a leader in the study of the link between abortion/contraceptives and breast cancer.

♥ The Polycarp Research Institute, Box 105, Enola, PA 17025, 717-732-4904; www.polycarp.org. A 501(c)3 non-profit organization dedicated to the promoting and disseminating of high quality research designed to enhance the physical, psychological and spiritual condition of mankind.

♥ Coalition on Abortion/Breast Cancer, P.O. Box 957133, Hoffman Estates, IL 60195-3051; 877-803-0102; www.abortionbreastcancer.com. A leading international women's organization that provides education and information on abortion as a risk factor for breast cancer.

Thank you Congressman Smith

Congressman Chris Smith (R-NJ), on 7/9/08, led other pro-life lawmakers in the House to call upon Congress to stop federal funds for Planned Parenthood and other family planning organizations that provide abortions.

In addressing Congress, Rep. Smith said he believes most Americans aren't even aware of how much of their tax dollars go to abortionists to establish and run hundreds of abortion mills throughout America. He said, "America's biggest abortion chain is Planned Parenthood. Each year, approximately 290,000 children are aborted in PP clinics. Each year, PP gets more than $335 million in taxpayer funds, including huge amounts from the Department of Health and Human Services' Title X programs." Last year PP received one-third of its budget from government funds.

Beware the Planned Parenthood Organizations' "Goals for 2025"

In PP of America's annual report for their fiscal year ending June 30, 2005, they reported that business was good and profitable. They performed 255,015 abortions, an increase of 9,923 over the previous year. They also made 1,414 referrals to adoption agencies, a decrease of 360 from the previous year.

Among PP's goals for 2025 are:

- Become an authoritative voice on bioethical standards
- Build the largest donor and citizen activist base of any social movement in this country
- Be more politically active
- Expand globally

In October 2006, PP acquired a new President, Cecile Richards. Mrs. Richards has political contacts. She is the former Deputy Chief of Staff for Speaker of the House, Nancy Pelosi.

FEDERAL LEGISLATION

THE CONVENTIONS

During the weeks of 8/25 and 9/1/08 a great many Americans were fastened to the media's coverage of the Democratic and Republican National Conventions.

Sadly, and unfortunately for the one and one-quarter million unborn babies that are sacrificed each year often to excruciatingly painful abortions, their fate was completely covered over by Presidential and V.P. aspirants Senator Barack Obama and Senator Joseph Biden.

What has given people who oppose abortion hope is the rigorous pro-life stand of presidential nominee John McCain and his running mate for V.P. Governor Sarah Palin.

Governor Palin factually demonstrated her pro-life belief and integrity by carrying to term and to new life her Down syndrome son. Governor Palin also showed support and protection of her unwed daughter's unborn baby. Both of these actions speak loudly to Senator McCain's and Governor Palin's bold and exemplary pro-life stand.

For our nation to turn back the infamous Roe v. Wade decision that legalized abortion on demand in our country, it is paramount that all vote on Election Day.

For information on Federal Legislation call John Healy 631-598-0430.

HEALTH & SCIENCE

UNICEF

It's that time of year again — those little orange boxes carried by children or positioned at the check-out line in the grocery store — asking for donations to the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF). Years ago, UNICEF was created to address the issues of poverty, clean water and education for the world's children. Today, the organization is heavily involved in promoting abortion in developing countries. A UN-sponsored conference was held last October in London entitled "Women Deliver." Out of the 98 scheduled sessions, 35 focused on abortion and 2 addressed newborn health. Each of the three daily opening plenary sessions highlighted 'reproductive rights' with leading abortion advocates. None of the sessions addressed primary child health issues such as vaccine availability, clean water, safe sanitation, availability of basic nutritional supplementation, training for village health workers in identifying calorie malnutrition, or provisions of foodstuffs to combat protein calorie malnutrition. Child mortality was minimally addressed as well.

A 2004 United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) report acknowledged that the best way to reduce maternal mortality was through the presence of skilled birth attendants and emergency obstetrics. These issues were minimally addressed at the October 2007 conference. Caesarian births, peri- and post-natal care, stillbirths and related complications were also downplayed at the conference. Obstetric fistula, the subject of a UNFPA awareness campaign, was only addressed twice.

Over the past few months, UNFPA and other UN agencies have been pushing a new target of "universal access to reproductive health by 2015." In 2000, more than 150 heads of state met and developed an agreement consisting of eight broad goals (Millennium Development Goals, MDGs) such as eliminating poverty and hunger, achieving universal primary education and reducing child mortality. None of these goals mentioned 'reproductive health' — a term that is used to promote abortion. The UN General Assembly has never agreed to such a definition.

Prior to the five-year review of the MDGs in 2005, pro-abortion advocates including the International Planned Parenthood Federation and UNFPA launched an aggressive campaign to adopt a new goal on 'reproductive health.' This effort failed. A political declaration endorsing 'reproductive health' was issued, but it is non-binding and has no force in international law. Abortion promoters have been trying since then to attach 'reproductive health' to the existing MDGs.

At the board meeting of UNICEF in June, 2008, the US delegation took issue with the latest UNICEF report which included a reference to a 'reproductive health' target under the MDGs. US representative to UNICEF Bill Brisben stated that the US is committed to achieving the core MDGs agreed to in the Millennium Declaration and reaffirmed the 2005 Outcome Document of the World Summit. He continued, however, that the US "does not support the addition of new goals, targets, or indicators to the internationally-agreed Millennium Development Goals...neither we nor other UN Member States have agreed to the creation by the UN Secretariat of a new MDG target on reproductive health."

Last month, the US rejected an invitation to join a new Danish campaign calling on governments to "accelerate implementation of Millennium Development Goal 3" calling for "gender equality and women's empowerment." Many believe this campaign is intended to go beyond the mandate and will be used to promote a new MDG on reproductive health supported by abortion advocates. The Danish government initiated the "Torch Campaign" to encourage governments and society to "Do Something Extra" to accelerate achievement of MDG 3. The campaign calls on governments to ensure women's "sexual and reproductive health and rights" by claiming that "access to services and information on sexual and reproductive health will empower women to make their own choices about the number of children they have, safe pregnancy and delivery."

Abortion advocates have been attempting to attach 'reproductive health' to MDG 5 which focuses on improving maternal health. The Torch Campaign is attempting to raise $500 million to improve the lives of women through the Thematic Fund on Maternal Health. In addition to focusing on the reduction of maternal death and disability, this fund also addresses "adolescent sexual and reproductive health and the prevention of unsafe abortion and the management of its complications." UNICEF is one of the "torch bearers" in this campaign, along with the World Health Organization and the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM).

Pro-life UN watchers remain concerned that the disproportionate focus on unsafe abortion based on questionable maternal mortality figures detracts from addressing the major health risks to pregnant women in the developing world, including severe bleeding, eclampsia and obstructed labor. A representative from a pro-life NGO (Non-governmental organization) stated at the 2007 conference in London, "If UNICEF and the other organizers cared more about maternal and child health they would focus on the top killers of women and children. It is clear to us that this conference is more about promoting abortion than it is about dealing with the issues that most women face every day."
